

THE IRISH PROCESS

Ireland has its own unique, highly specific process for determining if a new medicine will be reimbursed or not. All medicines undergo an economic evaluation to assess whether the new medicine is clinically and cost-effective for the population who are to receive the medicine.

